I am pleased to write this letter of recommendation for Nicole Beraud, who served as a copywriter on my team at Episode Four. In my role as Executive Creative Director, I had the opportunity to both mentor and work closely with Nicole across a wide range of clients and projects and can say without hesitation that she is one of the most versatile writers I have had the pleasure of collaborating with.

Nicole's strengths span the full breadth of what great copywriting demands. She has a rare ability to develop clever, funny campaign concepts and a sharp instinct for brand voice. She can walk into a brief, quickly understand the essence of what a brand is trying to say, and return with ideas that are strategically grounded and creatively exciting.

Her long-form writing is equally strong: we asked her to produce everything from editorial features to video content to cookbooks, and she brought the same level of craft and care to each. She understood that clever copy isn't enough...it also has to work hard. Her ads, site copy, and banner concepts consistently delivered on both dimensions.

Beyond the quality of her work, Nicole is simply a wonderful person to have on a team. She approaches every assignment with enthusiasm, takes creative feedback gracefully, and has a collaborative spirit that lifts the people around her. She is curious, funny, and dependable.

I would rehire her without a second thought given the opportunity. I recommend her to you with full confidence. Whoever brings Nicole on board will be lucky to have her.

Sincerely,

Andrew Miller
